Working at Siwash requires a great deal from every member of the team: Your daily commute will be lengthy, over rough gravel roads, or you may be required to live onsite. Either way, this is a unique setting where staff work, live and socialize together in a remote communal environment with little personal space and privacy. There will be a great deal of hard physical work, with long days in hot, humid or cold weather. You will be challenged to consistently strive for very high standards in your work. It takes a certain type of individual and strength of character to be happy here. This is seasonal work and by nature it can be very intense.

Now think of some situations when you have been very tired or stressed, then comment below on how you tend to act toward other people at such times.

Comment on how you tend to respond to hard physical demands when you are tired and under stress.

---

---

---

Other than those already listed in this application, name some of the challenges you might have to face on the job and while living at Siwash.

---

---

---

What experience have you had travelling, working, or living in remote locations?

---

---

How do you keep physically fit?

---

---

What are likely to be your personal dietary challenges? What foods are you unwilling or unable to eat?

---

---

What are your career goals in the next 1-2 years? 3-5 years?

---

---

---

What do/did you enjoy most about your previous/current job?

---

---

---

What do/did you enjoy least about your previous/current job?

---

---

---

Is there anything health related, time related, or otherwise that could prevent you from meeting the requirements of the position you're applying for?

---

---

---

If you were offered a place on our team, what would delay or prevent you from accepting the offer and making a full commitment? What would you have to do before committing?
